

Network Installation and Overhaul

If your a start up company or have an existing office that needs an over haul DMGi can help you design and implement a new network or overhaul your existing one. Most networks that have been in place for some time, especially for SMB tend to get parts added here and there as needed without thought to the overall structure. This can seriously affect performance of network file shares, backups and your security.

Network design and installation is the key to the success of your long-term IT strategy. Get it right at the beginning and your on-going support costs will be greatly reduced as you go forward, from switches, router, firewalls and cabling we take care to make sure you have exactly what you need and there is no one weak link in the entire installation.

Proper planning is essential. It's the only way to guarantee we complete our work on time and in budget. What's more, we can either work with your own IT people to deliver the project or provide a total team.

You can be sure we'll put together the right IT solution for you.
